What is a Federal Student Loan?

A student loan is a federally funded loan that must be repaid with interest. Student loans will supply a student or their parents in some instances with borrowed funds to help them pay for college or university under the support of the federal government. Federal student loans come with relatively low interest rates, flexible repayment terms, and many other options and benefits.